Course Description

This course introduces students to the study of global communications; basic history, key concepts, major theories and practices of communications studies. It also introduces research methods for studying the globalization of media and culture. Students learn a mixture of qualitative approaches. They also study a variety of research methodologies and learn how to create research projects and develop thesis-writing skills. They learn how various disciplines—(economics, political science, anthropology, sociology, linguistics) deal with issues of globalization of communications and how to take stands on philosophical and political issues. Students learn practical skills to research and evaluate research as an essential part of their education, indispensable training for conducting research projects and evaluating research articles in other communication studies courses.

Course Learning Outcomes

What sort of human phenomena do we study in communication studies?
What are the methods at our disposal for understanding, analyzing, and producing communications?
How does one conduct a professional research project in communications studies?
What are the social, political, and philosophical assumptions that underlie particular research methodologies? What are the strengths and weaknesses of each methodology?
Students will also develop the following skills for academic research in communications: drafting a literature review, producing an appropriate bibliography, and distinguishing between an annotated bibliography and a literature review;
thinking through and justifying the choice of an appropriate method; demonstrating a working knowledge of this method by collecting data and producing some initial findings based on appropriate analysis;
recognizing the advantages and difficulties of the method chosen;
recognizing and using internationally accepted standards for documentation and style.

Attendance Policy

Students studying at The American University of Paris are expected to attend ALL scheduled classes, and in case of absence, should contact their professors to explain the situation. It is the student’s responsibility to be aware of any specific attendance policy that a faculty member might have set in the course syllabus. The French Department, for example, has its own attendance policy, and students are responsible for compliance. Academic Affairs will excuse an absence for students' participation in study trips related to their courses.

Attendance at all exams is mandatory.

IN ALL CASES OF MISSED COURSE MEETINGS, THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR COMMUNICATION WITH THE PROFESSOR, AND FOR ARRANGING TO MAKE UP MISSED WORK, RESTS SOLELY WITH THE STUDENT.

Whether an absence is excused or not is ALWAYS up to the discretion of the professor or the department. Unexcused absences can result in a low or failing participation grade. In the case of excessive absences, it is up to the professor or the department to decide if the student will receive an “F” for the course. An instructor may recommend that a student withdraw, if absences have made it impossible to continue in the course at a satisfactory level.

Students must be mindful of this policy when making their travel arrangements, and especially during the Drop/Add and Exam Periods.

Grading Policy

Final grades will be calculated as follows:

Part I (Doyle) 30% (Nation report, globalization essay)

Part II (Elder) 30% (Interview assignment, participatory observation, in class exercises)

Part III (Payne) 30% (discourse analysis, semiotic analysis, literature review)

Final Exam 10% (Oral presentation of research proposal)
